

ABSTRACT

A system for stocktaking management includes a server computer (10) and at least one warehouse (40) connected with the server computer via a network (30). Each warehouse includes a plurality of stock locators (44), each stock locator has a single, unique identification number, each warehouse further comprises at least one client computer (42) connected with the server computer for a user to input information on stocks; the server computer is used for storing and processing information on stocks, the server computer comprises at least an input device for inputting information on stocks (16), at least a display device for displaying (18), at least a database (14) for storing information on stocks, and a function module (12) for receiving and processing the information on stocks input by a user. A related method is also disclosed.